Panlilio eyes presidency

GOV. ED PANLILIO (Doesn't have to be one, I will support a good candidate)

'I'm open to taking up the challenge'

By Tina Arceo-Custodio

THIS EARLY FLEDGES FROM overseas are coming in for Pangasinana Gov. Ed Panlilio.

An elderly gentleman has expressed intention to part with $100 from his budget for hypertension and diabetes medicine. A Filipino in New York is also putting in $100, and another is contributing $5.

A member of Philippine Military Academy Class of 1983 has pledged an initial $500. A current worker in Japan is offering $1,000.

Kindred like donor from ordinary Filipino clamoring for good governance and willing to put their money where their mouth is are serving to encourage Panlilio to seriously consider seeking the presidency in 2010, with Isabela Gov. Grace Padua on his running mate.

"I am open to taking up the challenge," Panlilio told the Inquirer yesterday in an interview at the newspaper's main office in Makati City.

This Catholic, grass-roots man said that while he was still in "a period of disconnection," he had taken steps to get civil society groups, nongovernment organizations and even military officials together and gather support for a reform candidate.

The Pasig speaks 'the voice of a river's past'

By Sunshine Lichaso de Leon

ON A HISTORIC STREET OF STA. ANA known as HERRAZ (now Pedro G.A.), stands a magnificently simple, 200-year-old Spanish colonial house, whose garden ends on the banks of the Pasig River. This is the home of 87-year-old Jessie Lichaso, whose narrative ritual of the spirit and heartbeat of a river whose glory has been forgotten with time and neglect.

Having lived the past 65 years by the Pasig River, Lichaso feels she has one of the most beautiful views in the world. Sitting on the covered porch watching the boats pass by, she declares, "Having seen this river gracefully flow as I myself have matured, I feel very generous and generous of my part of the river. It's beautiful and quiet and the most peaceful place."

CAGAYAN CITY—AN EXPOSÉ THAT he is preparing against the Arroyo administration may have failed, never implicating him in the November 2000 murder of politician Salvador "Ding" Dacanay and driver Stanislaus Corbis, according to Sen. Panfilo "Ping" Lacson.

"They [are] trying to defuse the bomb that I will initiate. That is why they are rushing the Dacanay case. But I will not budge," Lacson said the day after on Friday night.

He declined to give details on the exposé but stated that it involved an anomalous infrastructure project.

The opposition senator met with his supporters in Cagayan on Friday. Yesterday, he was the guest at the alumni homecoming of the Isabela National High School in the capital town of Baguio.

Asked to comment, Malabon-based Lacson laughed off Lacson's claim that it was talking him in the Dacanay Corbis murder to preempt his exposé.

"First of all, the Palace has never initiated any Ping story. Secondly, the good senator has been consistent in choosing bombshells [that] never exploded due to absence of evidence," Undersecretary Anthony Galan, Presidential Magapal-Arroyo's deputy spokesperson, said on the phone.

Gov't wants Blair, Annan as peace advisers

GOVERNMENT NEGOTIATIONS ARE preparing that former British Prime Minister Tony Blair and former United Nations Secretary General Kofi Annan be invited to serve as advisers in the peace talks with the separatist Moro Islamic Liberation Front.

Arturo Paredes, the presidential adviser on the peace process, said the government peace panel has suggested that an eminent persons group composed of internationally respected figures, like Blair and Annan, be invited to advise and guide the discussions.

The idea was launched by the peace chief, Rafael Bogdan, in reaction to

Talks have broken down—Gordon

Senator says gov't not moving to free hostage; job left to 'reckless' officer

By Michael Lim Llanes

NEGOTIATIONS WITH THE ARU SANYAP TO FREE INTERNATIONAL COORDINATOR OF THE Red Cross (CRC) aid workers—Swiss Andreas Nottner, Italian Eugenio Vigna and Filipino Mary Jean Locobon—now hang in the balance after contact broke down on Thursday.

The government is not moving fast talking with the Abu Sayyaf. Mike Nottner has been nothing. They're waiting to see whether they are willing and agreeable," said Sen. Richard Gordon in an interview with the Inquirer yesterday. Gordon, chair of the Philippine National Red Cross, accused Brig. Gen. Antonio Tubbahan, head of the south-western Mindanao-based Task Force Caracal, of alienating others for the safe release of one of the three aid workers held hostage for over two months near by the Abu Sayyaf.

Convinced by phone, Gordon said he had spoken talking with Tubbahan last week, where they entered the peace talks. They claimed that they had killed Nottner, but, conveniently, getting the (presumably) action from the Abu Sayyaf—demonstrating some of the heads of the aid workers.

"At last, I was able to stop the execution of the hostages," Gordon said.

"I think that because he will allow it if it is not necessary," he has proof of this. Now they are not being shot, they're only in the basement. The safety of the hostages as well as the aid workers is guaranteed," said the senator.

Who's in control?

Gordon said he was "frustrated." "We were frustrated. Nobody is in control of this operation. We don't know who is in control. The military is not in control," he said.

For negotiations to continue, he advised the AFP to "send somebody who is not involved."

A "teacher or a police officer" should not be sent to meet on an emergency basis, said Gordon.

Based on a gentleman's agreement between Tubbahan and Gordon, the military was supposed to pull back at the same time that the Abu Sayyaf was to release one of the captives.

With Gordon directly talking with Tubbahan, the plan was endorsed by AFP Chief of Staff Gen. Alexander Tano, Defense Secretary Gilbert Sison and Interior Secretary Ronaldo Pomaroy during a three-hour conference with Gordon at Camp Crame in Quezon City on Wednesday night.

But Tubbahan, unknown to Gordon, reportedly withdrew his troops on Thursday without following proper procedures, thus precipitating the release of a hostage.

Tubbahan accused Tubbahan of "betraying the safety of the hostages."

"I don't know if he had someone to take the truck, who ordered the attack?" he asked Tubbahan.

Tubbahan said Tano was asking the military to pull back further which was tantamount to pulling out immediately from the area. He said, "I was not involved in the attack, I was not involved in the attack."

"I wanted that (Tubbahan) was always surrounded by my men," said Gordon. "I was not involved in the attack, I was not involved in the attack."

Set time frame for MNLF pact implementation, OIC urges gov't

By Cynthia D. Balana

THE BUREAU OF INVESTIGATION (BI) of the Islamic Commission (OIC) wants the government to set a specific time frame for the full and comprehensive implementation of its 1996 peace accord with the Moro National Liberation Front (MNLF) in order to bring lasting tranquility to Mindanao.

President Gloria Macapagal Arroyo, OIC secretary general, said in a statement that four years had passed since the OIC Council of Foreign Ministers people have hopes. We have to put a time frame on this process and a benchmark to measure its success or failure," he said.

Although said that advancing the peace process would bring about security, prosperity and development for all Filipinos, not just those in the south.

He said that during the third session of the tripartite meeting among the Philippines, the OIC and the MNLF held in Manila from March 17 to 23, participants were hoping to reach comprehensive solutions for the full and comprehensive implementation of the 1996 agreement with MNLF chair Nur Misuari.

He said that the working groups had completed their work in Manila and presented their recommendations along with their proposals.

He said the working groups had also suggested solutions to a number of existing problems, and were able to lay out the gap between the two sides in the discussions were marked by a climate of frankness and openness.

"It is an appreciation that the results of these meetings should form a stepping

Turkey backs RP quest for peace in South

TURKEY HAS EXPRESSED ITS SUPPORT FOR the Philippine government's peace initiative and for bringing the Organization of Islamic Cooperation (OIC) to its quest to bring stability and development to Mindanao, the Department of Foreign Affairs said yesterday.

Turkish President Abdullah Gul, in a meeting with Foreign Secretary Alberto Romulo in the capital city of Ankara yesterday, said Turkey, as a member of the OIC and of the Peace Commission of the Southern Philippines, was committed to the early resolution of the Mindanao situation as well as the completion of the peace talks between the government and the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF).

Romulo was in Ankara from March 19 to 23 to discuss Philippine-Turkey relations.

Turkey is a major player in the Middle East's peace efforts, and is keen to ensure that the peace talks in the Philippines are successful.

The OIC and Turkey and Gul reviewed the status of bilateral relations and agreed to enhance the trade links—politics and economy—and to strengthen relations and cooperation.

The agreement also includes Turkey's support for the OIC's peace initiative and for bringing the OIC to its quest to bring stability and development to Mindanao.

Romulo said Turkey for its regional and global role as a mediator and peace broker. Turkey assumed this year for two-year term as a non-permanent member of the United Nations Security Council.

Romulo also met with his Turkish counterpart, Foreign Minister Ali Babacan.

Romulo invited Babacan to the Office of the Philippine Ambassador in Ankara, Turkey, which Turkey will host on April 7.

Romulo pledged support for Philippine initiatives on the bilateral dialogue and will be invited to participate in the OIC Summit (International Meeting on Islamic Dialogue and Development) to be held in the Philippines in December 2009.

Ghana job? Check first

THE COORDINATE OF GHANA IN THE Philippines recently warned Filipino jobseekers against bogus companies offering employment work in the African country.

In a statement, Ghana's Embassy in Manila said that the Government of Ghana is not recruiting, Ghana is not becoming a center of migration to Africa.

As a result, offers of employment in the country abroad, especially through the internet, that are more often than not, scam, he said.

"These companies, which usually hire us by e-mail, offer salaries that are extremely beyond the normal rates, along with benefits that are beyond belief," Mad said.

He said that when applicants sign up, they are asked to shell out money for the provisioning of visas, travel, work and housing permits, and other documents.

Some even charge a "diplomatic service fee" for a document official to personally enter on the Philippines in stamp their visa and deliver their work documents, he said.

Also said the only legitimate issuer of visas for Ghana is the Ghanaian Embassy in Manila.

He said that those who have been employed in Ghana should call the Ghana
Embassy at tel. 001-9012 or e-mail info@ghanaemb.com to verify if the companies recruiting them are legitimate.

- An important result
 - Relating to one of the following
 - post-translationally altering amino acids
 - new proteins
 - increasing the FGF21 response to exercise
 - NR-1, FGFRL1 and FGF21 receptor variants
 - In a 10-page review
 - post-translational PT modification of the bone and its implications
 - PT in protein function, localization
 - how it governs the mechanisms regulating growth for vertebrate animals in one of the FGF21-related mechanisms
 - how protein PT increases and alters osteoblast differentiation

Election automation

Computers can be hacked

By Bernadette Y. Lopez

THREE AUTOMATED systems were considered for the 2004 elections. Two—digitalized Ballot Boxes (DBB) and Internet Voting (iVoting) (2004) systems—were placed in the electronics for the Automated Election System (AES) in the National Capital Region in Quezon City. The third, iVoting, was not selected.

The Commission on Elections (Comelec) never evaluated its official report on the results. The DBB, iVoting, and iVoting, even if it is better than the first two, as claimed by its proponents, was not pilot tested.

Based on these two pilot tests, an automated election system should be selected and it was not pilot tested, an automated election system should be selected and it was not pilot tested, an automated election system should be selected and it was not pilot tested.

Let me play devil's advocate to the system of election automation through automation. We may get out of some existing election systems (not automated, but we may create some sort of digitalized system).

Analog, digital fraud

Existing frauds are physical, such as giving voters or rigging ballot boxes or tampering with them. Digital fraud, which can be by the system itself, is more complex, involving software, hardware, and digitalization of votes.

Field reports in the NO-REM manual computer DBB system, which has no means of tampering with the system, are not considered possible. We may not be able to quickly tamper with the system.

Reporters would like to know if the system is secure. It is not clear if the system is secure. It is not clear if the system is secure.

IT TOOK MORE THAN A MONTH TO MANUALLY COUNT and count the votes for presidential and vice presidential candidates in the 2004 elections. It took more than two months to finish the counting and counting of votes for senatorial candidates in 2007.

In the May 2010 national elections, which will be automated, the Commission on Elections expects to reduce it to just one month of days for counting and counting of votes for national elective positions.

Despite spending up the counting, poll automation is expected to do away with the various forms of cheating that characterized manual elections in the country. (See list below.)

However, some voters fear that poll automation could lead to automated cheating. Preventing computerized cheating to ensure the integrity of election results next year is the big challenge that the Comelec faces—ED.

Ombudsman Visayas pours out outrage

It ain't over for case of overpriced lampposts

By Benito Magalona
 Cebu City

CEBU CITY—THE DISMISSAL OF ONE OF THE cases on the overpriced lamppost controversy has Visayas Deputy Ombudsman Delagio Apostol up in arms.

Apostol on Friday dismissed prosecutor Danilo Lopez for saying before the Sandiganbayan 2nd Division that the Ombudsman has no evidence against the respondents and the case had defects because it was filed due to pressure from the media.

The Sandiganbayan 2nd Division dismissed criminal case No. 271 filed against businessman Indelic Brana, owner of Indelic Construction and Equipment Supply Co., Inc., one of the suppliers of the allegedly overpriced lampposts, after Lopez moved to withdraw the case for lack of evidence against the accused.

Plat-evaluation project

The lampposts were installed in the cities of Marikina, Lapa-Lapa and Cebu for the Asean, east of Southeast Asian Summit summit in 2006 and were worth about P150 million.

"I condemn this type of statement. That is an irresponsible statement. What does he think of me? We are just launching the respondents? It's not easy to file a case against the respondents because they have protection under the law," Apostol said in an interview here.

He said the statement of Lopez was unfair in personnel of the Visayas Ombudsman who had worked hard for the filing of the case.

Apostol also said they would pursue the cases on the overpriced lampposts before the Sandiganbayan, but they would also ask Lopez to indemnify himself from handling the cases.

Hostile prosecutor

"The Visayas Ombudsman will no longer agree that he prosecuted the overpriced lamppost cases," Apostol said. He maintained that Lopez appeared as a hostile against the lamppost case.

"We think that Prosecutor Lopez should submit," he added.

In the same time, Apostol said that the Visayas Ombudsman would assign somebody from their office to attend the hearing in Manila.

"Because of this development, I will assign someone on the case who will attend cases like this," he said, adding that he might send assistant Ombudsman Virginia Fabianza-Lamigao, a heavy member of the grand investigating body.

Apostol also said they would seek an investigation of Lopez for having misled the respondents without consulting the Manila Ombudsman.

On Thursday, Apostol just re-proposed charges over the dismissal but he expressed dismay over the developments when he returned and read the Sandiganbayan order on Friday.

Reinvestigation

He stated that the Visayas Ombudsman will still conducting a reinvestigation and preliminary investigation of four other cases on the allegedly overpriced lampposts, which were reinstated in their office by the Sandiganbayan.

The Ombudsman had withdrawn criminal cases No. 270, 271 and 272 for reinvestigation while criminal case No. 272 was dismissed by the Sandiganbayan 4th Division but without prejudice to the re-filing of the case after the reinvestigation.

Apostol said they have almost completed the reinvestigation of the four cases, adding that they planned to consolidate all the cases.

He said they would also look at the possibility of re-filing the case against Brana as well as the filing of a petition for annulment before the Supreme Court for the reversal of the Sandiganbayan order.

Investigators found the lampposts overpriced by more than 100 percent.

Some of the lampposts are seen online as there are no lighted pictures.

After 36 yrs, RP's first flood forecasting system now hi-tech

By Toneta Oraga
Inquirer-Genel Llanes

CITY OF SAN FERNANDO—After 36 years, the Pasigpag River Basin Flood Forecasting and Warning System (PFRFWS) serving Purok 103A, Pasigpag, and Marikina has been modernized through a P408 million grant from the Japanese government to improve life-saving efforts in communities.

The PFRFWS, the country's first facility of such nature, was not only fixed with modern computers. Its operational base was transferred from the Queen City center of the Philippine Atmospheric, Geophysical and Astronomical Services Administration (PAGASA) to the Visayas-Magelang Government Center here. This was the Philippine government's counterpart in the grant.

President Maengal-Ayres and Japanese Ambassador

Wakao Kawan inspected the upgraded facility on Wednesday here.

During the briefing by De Prince Sida, Pagasa administrator, the Ayres was in front of one of the computer monitors to see the transmission of data from a network of automatic measuring stations, including three separate stations set up in the same premises.

These provide hourly, real-time information on the intensity of rainfall and level of water in the Pasigpag River and its tributaries, including the Guagua River in Pasigpag.

About 30 other operators in General Llanes Area are on the Pasigpag River before calling in the Marikina.

The high-tech multiplex radio network, which has been equipped since 1972 with 800 megahertz and 2-pole low frequency, has been upgraded to 7.2 GHz.

33 Guinsaugon orphans graduate from high school

By Joy A. Gubata
Inquirer-Visayas

THEIRAN CITY—Thirty-three orphans from Guinsaugon in St. Bernard, Southern Leyte, who were orphaned by the land slide that destroyed their village in 2006 graduated from high school on Wednesday.

The graduation of Guinsaugon's orphaned students are proof that they were able to overcome the tragedy that hit their village three years ago, said Maria Dela Cruz, in charge of the 'Treasures of Guinsaugon' project.

"We are happy for these students who were able to finish their high school. They realized at their young age that there is still a life ahead of them and that there is hope for them here," Gubata said.

Gubata said the students were very grateful that the project was launched by Digital Media in the region and that the Guinsaugon is the aftermath of the landslide that wiped out the village of Guinsaugon.

"During our recent visit to St. Bernard, these children routinely could not express to us how much they were grateful that because of the program, they were able to finish high school and eventually start college education," Gubata said.

The 33 students are in Grade seven high school at Cebu Bay Regional High School, located in the same center of St. Bernard, which became an evacuation center when their village was leveled to the ground in Feb. 17, 2006 after landslides and mud waves swept down from Mt. Carabao.

Over a thousand people, including 200 elementary school children, died in the tragedy.

"Project Guinsaugon: Taking Education" was launched in March 2007, to the first for the first school year so that students orphaned by the tragedy could continue their studies.

At least 100 students were originally identified by the Digital to receive scholarship under the program but many left St. Bernard to live with their relatives.

Under the program, initial the students received a P500 monthly allowance for transportation and other school needs. These also finished high school and school to continue a college education can still avail themselves of the scholarship as long as they still take a four-year course in a college or university within Eastern Visayas.

Since it was launched since then, two years ago, Digital has raised more than 10 million to donate from various groups and individuals.

The money is deposited at the Land Bank of the Philippines.

NPA 'tax collector' falls in entrapment

LUGER CITY—POLICE ARRESTED a suspected NPA (New People's Army) tax collector who allegedly tried to extort money from a man's owner in Pampanga, Quezon on Friday, a police report said.

The report identified the suspect as Abay Agustin, 30, a resident of Pampanga City, Pampanga.

In a recent incident, Agustin, 30, with an American national who owns a health center in the area, reported to the police that since March 13, the suspect had been demanding P7,000 from him in exchange for protection and security through several text messages.

The report said the suspect introduced himself in the recent case as "Abay Agustin," allegedly a member of the NPA, and was operating in the area.

The local police set an entrapment operation to arrest the suspect.

At around 10:30 a.m. Friday, Agustin appeared at the scene to get the money. Immediately after he had received the money (P7,000) paid with him (P5,000) bills, he was immediately arrested by the police.

The suspect also asked them Agustin the mobile phone which he had been using in sending demand messages to the victim. Delia T. Macari Jr., Inquirer Southern Luzon

Saving Sarangani Bay's coral reefs

 By Aquino Zonia
 Correspondent

CORAL REEFS—The "rainforest" of the sea, according to environmentalists—are the most diverse, the most beautiful and the richest of all marine habitats. They serve as natural barriers, protecting shorelines and reducing erosion from the vicious pounding of waves and storms.

But only a few people are paying attention to the coral reef protection and preservation despite their vital role in the marine ecosystem, according to Reef Check, the world's largest reef conservation organization.

In its September 2002 report, the Reef Check found that only five percent of the coral reefs in the Philippines—the second largest in Asia—were in "excellent condition." These were the Tubbataha Reef Marine Park in Palawan, Apo Island in Negros Oriental, Apo Reef off Marikina, Galera Reef in Misamis, and the Tubbataha Shoal in Palawan.

Add Sarangani Bay in the south where numerous destructive has continued unabated, although then President Fidel V. Ramos declared Sarangani Bay a protected sanctuary in 1996, dives there had more than half of the coral reefs in its 238-kilometer coastline are now just a few slabs but almost wiped out.

Barrel surviving

Chris Dumas, an English dive instructor, reveals that only the reef inside the western part of the bay from the coastal village of Banting in General Santos City up to Malubog town in Misamis, are still intact.

From the dozens of fisher villages in General Santos going west to the town of Malubog, Malubog and General Santos, only about 10 percent to about 15 percent of the reefs are barely surviving.

Recently, Dumas and other diving enthusiasts checked the status of the reef corals.

"The eastern side has been the hardest hit as perikanan, chemicals and pollutants from the burning and industrial activities have been in our bay," he says. Unlike the beautiful reefs on the western side, they are mostly dead or dying.

Further south, the situation seemed to be somewhat better, but still in the process of deterioration and Misamis, but further and chemical pollution has been something worse in the reef and off Malubog. This was expected by the presence of aquaculture farms.

"Thousands of fish and shrimps continued to land-based and floating fish cages around the reef," he says. "The cages are a regular bane, thus creating an erosion of nutrients in the water causing algae to bloom and cover the reefs," Dumas says.

Rigil fishing

During several dives outside, Dumas, who owns the Sea City Diving Center and Cambridge Dive School in General Santos, and John Smith, an American businessman engaged in tourism, realized that illegal fishing methods had damaged the reefs on the western side of the bay.

Since government agencies and the people talked with protecting the delicate marine environment are not doing anything to check the reef destruction. Dumas and Smith thought of a private-sector initiative to save the reefs. Thus, the idea of an artificial reef structure was spawned.

On April 1, 2005, the structure made of concrete "canopies" was built. The structure, which was built by the Malubog, Fish Port, Malubog and other wealthy residents followed, all in the same shape and design.

Each dome, made from locally available materials, such as cement, steel bars, sand and gravel, limestone slabs, oil and water, cost only about $200.

With the help of local divers, Dumas set up the first five-foot dome off Malubog (Duma's Bay) in Banting, General Santos, on April 17, 2005. The project is also used by the Philippine Fishery Division.

"Once a dome is installed in a damaged or barren section of a reef, it acts as a stable platform for live baiting operations to attract themselves and also just a short period of time, they marine creatures will start to grow on its surface," Dumas said.

But in the western side of the bay, the marine animals in such areas may find problems.

5,000 marine animals
In three years, Dumas and Smith, along with other divers and sponsors, deployed 1,000 artificial reef domes in 20 areas in the western part of the bay. The project was completed in August last year, but maintenance and monitoring are continuing.

Dumas set the project cost around nearly P1 million, including expenses for work and diving gear, transport and accommodation. "The total amount would be at least five dollars or more," he says.

The project completely exposed more than 100 hectares, within the first 24 hours of deployment, the close surface of the reef domes have been covered with fish eggs, many of them have resulted in fish or marine life, which are the reef domes as steps to catch smaller fish.

Right now, Dumas says, several more are currently going up on other reefs in the bay.

"Many patches of oil coral colonies the reef domes along with barnacles and other types of permanent shellfish organisms. It actually thought that it would take many years for hard corals to show themselves. We were very surprised to see that it only took less than nine months ...!

with barnacles and other types of permanent shellfish organisms. It actually thought that it would take many years for hard corals to show themselves. We were very surprised to see that it only took less than nine months or so for these hard corals to start to show themselves," Dumas says.

In one site in Banting, fish in the bay, coral growth was faster with large Acropora corals covering many of the domes, he says.

"The divers observed that fish populations had drastically increased in Sarangani Bay. They suggested that fisheries should go back to the traditional 'hook-and-line' method instead of using fish-trap nets.

Bigger threat looms

Harsh fishing practices, along with climate change, are threatening the natural coral reefs and artificial reefs domes. Local governments around the bay are now relying behind the project and actively implementing fisheries and environmental laws.

A few years ago, the provincial board adopted a resolution declaring Sarangani Bay a marine park. The province has a certain Mr. Peralta, a city engineer, is involved in the "Sarangani Bay" project, for legally collaborating with the Philippine Marine Mammal Research & suspended Gary for one month, about that he was not conducting any monitoring of his employees. Sarangani Bay was proposed as a large of a no-take marine preserve of the province. It has launched the Sarangani Bay project to raise people's awareness about the utmost importance of conserving the bay.

Now comes another challenge in the province with the construction of a 200-megawatt coal-fired power plant. Dumas and Smith fear that the 2,000-million Sarangani Bay project (2005) will be in jeopardy, with the massive damage just on the reef corals.

and dive sites but also on the environment and public health.

Officials of Reef Check Group (RCG), the main project, however, say that the company would employ the circular artificial reef construction (RCG) process, considered the "best" method and "cheapest" among available non-owned plant technologies to the industry today. In a statement, Joseph Brown, RCG vice president for business development, said that the company would embark on a "massive" planting of trees in a 10,000-hectare land identified as a carbon sink.

Solar eclipses ABS-CBN

Pacquiao May 2 fight vs Hatton stays at GMA-7

By Jennifer M. Pano

AS QUICK AS HIS RINGSIDE, MANOY PACQUIAO made another abrupt maneuver by booking up more with Solar Sports.

Pacquiao announced yesterday that he was leaving his previous deal with Solar Sports to sign his May 2 fight against Ricky Hatton on GMA-7, all in "friendly trading" and finding that his new move proved to be "valid and fruitful."

"The [particular] have favorably considered their own interests and understanding," Solar Sports said in a combined statement. "Shirley and IOP Productions have agreed to honor the television rights agreement and fully comply with the terms and conditions thereof."

The world's second-most paid boxing promoter, through a statement read by his lawyer Franklin Ford on GMA-7 last night, he announced that he was leaving Solar Sports in favor of ABS-CBN.

The ABS-CBN move, a courtesy reflecting its respect for boxing to make demands, could not be reached for comment.

GMA-7 doesn't own the exclusive right to broadcast Pacquiao's fights, but signed into black-tie agreements with Solar Sports to book those fights on its channel.

"Our partnership (involving) my personal long-term move to support my own competitive ring career, including my future fight (the currently, sports) giving for the conclusion in which network will set my fight against Ricky Hatton," said the fighter.

"We do not intend to sign any long-term partnership or program as (this) was just a result of a misunderstanding between Solar Entertainment Corporation and MIP Productions."

The statement came following a working report submitted by Pacquiao's wife, Solar Sports president Wilfredo Daga and chief operating officer Steve Chanciano in Los Angeles yesterday.

Last Wednesday, the world's second-most paid boxing promoter made a surprise announcement via national television that he had signed up with ABS-CBN to network his upcoming fights.

The move set the stage for a boxing world shock worth about $750 million as Solar Sports claimed that the Filipino ring hero had signed Solar Sports to book his fight against Hatton on GMA-7 from May 7, 2011 to May 6, 2011.

Pacquiao also has two deals with GMA-7 and has no existing contract with the station that has him book, according to sources in progress of the deal.

"In general, I think when he signed the letter (on working) but contract with Solar), he did not have his intention toward him," said Solar Sports, Solar Sports vice president for sales and marketing.

This time, in the presence of GMA-7, Pacquiao signed another contract of his personal agent, apt

Nestlé in RP brews up coffee planting plan

Buying stations put in place to help farmers

By Lisa Arceo-Dumala

EVERY DAY, FOUR OF five Filipino coffee drinkers reach out for a cup of Nescafé to perk up their mornings and get their day off to a good start. This has made Nestlé Philippines Inc., the local subsidiary of Nestlé S.A. of Switzerland, the dominant player in the growing coffee industry in the Philippines.

The success of Nestlé is due in no small part to the close ties of the coffee farmers all over the country who supply it with the top-quality coffee beans to sustain its manufacturing and distribution business.

Thus, Nestlé believes that it is vital to help improve the plight of the coffee farmers who form a vital link in its extensive supply chain. Ultimately, what is good for the farmers is good for Nestlé, too.

To do so, Nestlé works directly in where the farmers are, and one of its major programs is the setting up of satellite buying stations in areas with great concentrations of coffee farmers.

The first buying station was set up in 1986 in Cebu. Today, it also has buying stations in Tagaytay, Cagayan, Iloilo, Marikina, Sillig, Cebu, Marikina, South Cotabato, San Francisco, Agusan del Sur, Bukidnon, Negros Occidental, and the Cagayan de Oro-Northern Mindanao.

Fair price

At these, where Nestlé's Agricultural Services Department, says that with the satellite buying stations, farmers have the option to sell directly to Nestlé without going through a trader, thus ensuring them a better price for their produce.

While the satellite buying stations helped raise the income of the farmers, Nestlé realized immediately that it needed to do more, especially in helping up the domestic production of Robusta beans, the main variety used in the manufacturing of its Nescafé coffee, such as the widely popular Nescafé Classic.

Thus, Nestlé International and its subsidiaries have a full-blown agronomy program that involves an four major areas: research and development, training, sustainability and marketing.

The latest center of this type of agricultural assistance is the Nestlé Experimental and Demonstration Farm in Eugene City, Ilocos del Norte, which was established in 2004 with the goal of reducing the growing gap between the supply and demand for coffee beans by spearheading research and training in coffee production.

The demonstration farm showcases new techniques in planting and cultivating coffee that were perfected through experience since Nestlé started manufacturing instant coffee locally in the Philippines in 1962.

Through exposure trips and technology transfer from these farms, Nestlé hopes that most farmers will be encouraged to increase their production and take advantage of the growing demand for the local crop.

To get them started, the firm has provided Robusta coffee seedlings at cost, and with the seedlings came training as well as access to banking and technology-related facilities.

Nestlé offers three kinds of sub-

Investment strategies for relationships

BY THE LARGEST MARGIN OF ANY CATEGORY, I did not have a correct view of life.

I approached life as if it were a dice machine. I wanted to put as much as possible into it, and I always hoped to be the judge.

The rubric turned to say that I did not find a similar approach to my interaction with people. I was more focused on what people could do for me than what I could do for them.

As a result, I would try to make a deal, and "win/lose" without even having made any deposits.

Needless to say, I was not very successful.

As I matured, I began to place a higher value on people. In making this transition, I noticed a fascinating development: the more I gave to relationships, the more I needed to gain from relationships.

In my book, "Winning With Principles," I named this phenomenon the Dinosaur Principle. When you put your relationship into a temporal setting, it goes to zero.

During my time in leadership, I've noticed that people kill another three times compared with regards to how they view relationships.

1) Values. Values matter and never give. They are the people in the who have a win-lose mentality. They try to connect as much as they can from the relationships in their lives, and they rarely do so, resulting in grief.

2) Trust. Trust is essential and thus gives. Trust is only real and pure a Christmas card. If you're mailed one to them, they perceive relationships as an equation in need of balance.

3) Income. Income matters, they have a debt of gratitude. If they and another person, they expect a financial return.

A LEADER'S WAY

John C. Maxwell

3) Investment. Investment gives and then receives. There are the people who give purely for the joy of giving. They add value to others, not in part of a cold calculation, but as a habit.

Although doing so may not seem like an instant return, in the long run they reap the gratitude and goodwill of those they have helped.

Investment strategies

Journal of viewing relationships as a stock machine. Picture them like the stock market. It gets rich, makes capital deposits in people as an investment portfolio item.

1) First, you may feel like the value of what you're putting in isn't worth the investment. However, like the stock market, in the long run, you'll reap dividends and returns.

2) Think "Growth First." Human nature tends to focus on personal needs, but investing in relationships requires us to prioritize others.

Journal of self-investment. Think others as investments. Like a responsible investor, avoid the temptation to "time" the entrance of market, using someone only for short-term gain. That's a strategy destined to fail.

On the contrary, make a habit of adding value to relationships and trust that the long-term results will be in your favor.

3) Focus on the investment, not the return. If you're ever purchased stock personally, then you know the agony of watching the volatility of the market.

Like a roller coaster, your portfolio climbs up one day only to crash down the next day instead of spending more money, a desired investment strategy on making the investment.

The same principle holds true in relationships. Don't expect immediate and immediate benefits from your relational inputs. Through time, you'll be able to see that as long as you're willing to invest, it will be a successful investment. Not all investments yield the same return, and not all relationships produce the same result. As a leader, make investing in others a general principle, but be deliberate about putting energy into low-risk, high-reward relationships.

Identify and identify people with desirable dispositions, and offer your relational capital to those who will make the most of it.

4) Clarify the investment. A relationship won't last long if you don't know what you're putting in. You have to be willing to make the first step.

Don't be afraid to put your relational investment, giving only to those who've first given to you. That's the responsibility for setting the tone of giving value in your relationship.

IN THE MOUNTAIN CITY, TENNESSEE, and Amy Randall took a lot of time when they bought a parcel of barren land in this city. It was only after 10 years when they started to reap the benefits of their hard work.

After 10 years, a tree and bush had been planted, others a rustic log cabin, wedding, company conference and family activities with a magical setting for married couples.

"It is privacy that people are looking for," said Randall.

She said the establishment aims to provide the right atmosphere and comfortable rooms—all carefully done—to help boost tourism in the local city.

"Single people I was happy to see last fall of grass (hills) and mountain hills," Randall said.

where they bought the property where tourism was meant to be seen.

He said he wanted a place where he and his wife could peacefully spend time after retirement, and "it was never in the plan to put up a resort."

It took the couple two years to be able to clear the land and grow about 600 rambutan trees.

They had acquired a 500-acre estate of land that they turned into a private road. They also bought nearby land, amounting to a total of 4.5 hectares, including a large, old and large.

"People asked us to share with them the place," and it was in 2006 when we decided to open this to the public and the land.

After from the last season, the couple also has a 20-year-old main service business in the area from where they received the capital for the business.

They believe in doing more with more trees to enhance the property on them.

"If there is a customer who is happy," said Randall, "we don't have a moment to worry about."

Ten minutes from NUAL's hub, the landscape comes alive. Greenways mingle between homes, lives intertwine. A lake befriends the hills, trees flirt with the sky. And in this charming quiet, the heart feels at home. Here, it's not daydreaming. It's living your dream everyday.

"Stunned by Soviet aggression, these states have chosen the less promising but sustainable solution of farming, providing coffee farmers low-cost subsidies on the grounds of application of farming input and techniques as they can improve their yield and earn more from growing coffee. Through this, we want to show farmers that coffee farming can be a viable economic resource," Kumbakumba adds.

Most people's definition of sweetspots is simply a place where you can find everything you need for your business. But at the FLRT Sweetspot launch, the definition was expanded to include the power of a contract or effectively.

In reality, every sweetspot is a place where you can find everything you need for your business. But at the FLRT Sweetspot launch, the definition was expanded to include the power of a contract or effectively.

It's not just the location of the sweetspot that matters, but the location of the sweetspot. It's not just the location of the sweetspot that matters, but the location of the sweetspot.

Designed to be strategically located in the heart of every business, the sweetspot is a place where you can find everything you need for your business. But at the FLRT Sweetspot launch, the definition was expanded to include the power of a contract or effectively.

Marketing Matters

As a well-known fact, every business is looking for a way to grow. But at the FLRT Sweetspot launch, the definition was expanded to include the power of a contract or effectively.

Margarita's new business tool

MARGARITA FORÉS IS on a roll.
This flamenco-trained chef, who helmed one of the most popular Indian eateries in the city, is not only now catering and food arrangements, she's also exploring yet another route: running a catering company in the Philippines.

But Forés is doing more of these without what others come to regard as a critical business tool—being that, she's a late convert to the practice of taping good, positive energy for the home and office, and of determining auspicious dates.

She's not opening houses until the moon is in its favorable phase.

She even followed the old Indian, and now, the Chinese, to do it. It doesn't hurt to heed it, she adds, doing away with the typical superstitions that are common in the Philippines. She moved the calendar away from the spot over which she poured chamomile tea, which she says is a good omen.

Margarita's new conversion isn't unique. In fact, there are more and more entrepreneurs, not native, who are tapping into the long-dormant belief in the power of the moon—something that is common in the Philippines. With these beliefs, it's not hard to get some help from the stars of the universe, something that has been lost in the modern world.

Marc Jacobs and BF about to tie the knot?

DESIGNER Marc Jacobs and his ex-wife, Lauren Marano, are engaged, according to a People magazine report. The couple is said to be in love.

FORÉS at Pops, which is about to be "big" about it.

she's the couple, who have been dating for a year, will "go public" as they arrive at the couple's new home in the Philippines.

Because of the couple's wedding plans, she's been able to get some help from the stars of the universe, something that has been lost in the modern world. She's not opening houses until the moon is in its favorable phase.

From good times to recession—how Manila's club scene is coping, with or without drugs

Louie Y says revenues are down by as much as 20 percent. Erik Cua says something else. Louie Cruz—still X-rated views

By Cleo K. Moral

IN GOOD TIMES OR bad, people go out to drink, either to celebrate or get totally wasted. Either way, club and bar owners have always had it good.

However, that seems to be not the case this time. Since the economic downturn, revenues have dropped by 20-30 percent, according to the managers of Manila's nightclubs.

"There are no more people and the market is so small," says Louie Twardy, "but in many ways, it's not as bad as it seems."

HOW GOOD IS IT?

Count down to a slimmer body with Envidia

Love the inches, shed the pounds. Slimming down is all in the numbers with new Envidia Green Tea.

Two times the slimming power
One delicious green tea
Zero sugar

One knows the slimming power
Envidia Green Tea is infused with L-Carnitine and H3C3. That's the power of two fat-burning ingredients working together to help you burn down.

L-Carnitine is a natural nutrient that plays an important role in the body's metabolism by helping:

- produce energy from fat
- improve athletic endurance
- promote recovery after exercise
- provide the heart and immune cells with energy
- prevent early onset of fatigue during exercise

The best thing about Envidia is that it contains 100% pure L-Carnitine.

H3C3 (hydroxybutyrate) is an anti-oxidant naturally found in green tea. It helps your body by decreasing the formation of free radicals which can do damage to your body cells. It also prevents the oxidation of LDL cholesterol (bad cholesterol) which can build up and block your blood vessels. It also has a thermogenic effect which makes the body produce more heat to burn fat.

One delicious green tea
Enjoy a refreshing way to a slimmer, sinner you. Envidia has that delicious green tea taste that you love in both refreshing flavors: Apple and Pineapple.

Zero sugar
Envidia has all the delicious goodness of green tea, the slimming properties of L-Carnitine and H3C3 without the sugar! That's how the slimming power and zero sugar.

The figures don't lie. No drink up and get the countdown to a slimmer body begin.

How and why I stopped being a serial dater

By David Nugent
Contributor

Hot—love—thoughts for summer

I STARTED THINKING about summer and summer vacations this past weekend when, on a flight back from Boracay, a dear friend wanted to go over the last page of Us Weekly. It's the one-page questionnaire based on the old Playboy Q&A about life, love and the fundamental question of happiness.

The questionnaire actually goes back pretty far. Apparently the Victorians loved answering endless questions about what they desired, particularly about romance. And in thinking about the Victorians, undoubtedly among the most romantic, repressed yet romantic of peoples, I got to thinking about romance, Philippine-style.

No Filipinos are fancy about romance. It's really a desire, and for most folks, a desire for the whole deal, for the love and the sex. People say going to our national parks, I disagree; we're simply a people in love with love. That goes even for those of us who aren't in love with anyone!

I've been late person to answer to let romanticism about romance. The best thing I've done with most of my relationships is not think too much, with a fundamental reason—I was in relationships for so many years and with so many different people, many reasons. I eventually stopped being a serial dater. It's important to sit back, take stock, and do the work you need to if you want to stop having failed relationships and start having great ones. No matter if they last only a weekend, a summer, or the rest of your life.

Looking back, I realize some of the biggest mistakes I've made are those that many others make, too:

Escape

The biggest mistake? Leaving love a relationship just for the heck of it. Or to escape a lonely situation, or a lonely or lonely! To escape for any reason. A relationship isn't an escape. Never get into a relationship if for the most basic reason—because you love and respect that person.

And never expect that love and respect get lost. In fact, sometimes, they don't. I've loved people I didn't respect all that much, and I've respected some I wasn't in love with.

I learned that one has to do more than share the person you're with. You must achieve like or love or both. I think it's important to keep in mind that neither love nor respect should be given too easily. Giving love and respect takes time and patience.

No Filipinos are often suckers—giving out money, much less love, when we meet the object of our passion around. Remember, real love and respect take time. When someone doesn't have either for you, he or she is not worth your.

Parasites

Another big mistake I had was making my partner as parasites for me living dealt with personal issues I should have resolved before getting into any relationship. In the Philippines, we spend a huge amount of time not dealing with our issues, whether they involve parents, siblings or ourselves.

Here's a suggestion: Before you fall in love—even before you think you're falling—take a breather and call a shrink. Write a people who should have a national therapy conversation. The most important relationship you should ensure a with yourself first—before you fall into a love, not other people, not money. How wonderful he or she may be, will be able to do it for you.

A temporary fix—your situation is that we often choose our partners based on what our families, friends and ourselves like. You might think you're choosing a partner, but, really, you will be doing it for us, for our friends, family, parents, who will choose buddies—usually everyone in the other person's life.

And they'll know all about your life together. And it's frequently a disaster. It's never just the two of you against the world.

Social position

So what to do? Fall in love with someone you want to be known. Or, ask that girl or that guy out who doesn't tell in your class, maybe he or she didn't attend your school, or read the same books. Maybe it's not his or her English that's so bad, but your English that needs a little work it know time do it.

It'll be OK; you'll grow because you've expanded not just your social circle, but also your heart and mind. I find that people so concerned with their social position are usually those who aren't smart. Just that isn't about being right or wrong, it's about balance. The Golden Rule is what begins a classy person.

Another important lesson, this time for the guy who isn't a girl's dream. Remember, you guys will never be more than just friends. So don't take the effort for more than what he or she can't share. Chances, there's love, but when it comes to love, you can love each other but should not be in love with each other.

I've seen time and again how the straight girl falls in love with the gay guy who's not his or her.

Thinking about all these lessons hasn't saved me at all, but, it's just given me a (slightly) better perspective. And it brings me back to the original Us Weekly questionnaire.

When asked to write your occupation, I wrote said (my boss is a boss). Being a boss.

He could have been a Filipino.

The Journey Experience at SM MOA

What does it take to get people to come to a concert?

1. Location! Location! Location! One of the world's largest malls and now a favorite concert destination provided for this event.

2. The Entertainment! An outstanding selection of musicians of the past, that comes along with reuniting with old friends and their songs while enjoying the fact that people have moved and sang their hearts out.

3. The Music! And to be sure, Janet Presley, is not a fellow Filipino. Having Journey is a band that does not need any sort of introduction. Janet, being the band's new face, has injected a lot of renewed energy and spirit to Journey's diverse music that spans two decades.

Thousands gathered at the SM Mall of Asia open concert grounds to this once-in-a-lifetime experience, for a band that has captured the ears and hearts of many. People of all ages, from all walks of life, connected by means of music, willing to venture. It was a great show - something that was worth watching, and perhaps, an experience that people would never truly believe all doing over and over again. Many thanks to the SM Mall of Asia and the SM Group International for making this concert possible. Watch out for more exciting concerts at the SM Mall of Asia!

Grand dinner marks La Chaine's induction gala

LA CREMIE DES RICHESSEMENTS is a 19th-century house built for the industrial giant of the time, the Comptoir d'Industrie et de Commerce, which was the first French bank to open a branch in London. It was built by the architect Louis-Jules de la Roche, who was also the architect of the Grand Hotel in Paris. The house is a masterpiece of the Second Empire style, with its ornate facade and its grand interior. It was built in 1861 and is now a museum of the city of Paris.

The event's French nature was emphasized by the smooth execution of Laurent L'Herminier, who has earned status as the prestigious Cédric Michel. The event was attended by 10,000, with a full of close quarters of Le Clos de Cédric.

Frederick, more Market and Anguilla Jullien, who is still in the Cria chapter. Market is the Hall Douglas for the entire Philippines, and on this occasion was called in the rank of Colonel Magness. The Exercises for the Discussion:

"The Philippines is an important area in the middle map of La Chaux," said Weil. He recounted how La Chaux was established and given 13 men of arms by Saint King Louis IX of France in 1249. Like 40 yards, La Chaux was destroyed during the French Revolution. It was rebuilt in 1950 and is now a worldwide organ-

Hill had a surprise for Michael and Anjelica. He announced they would be decorated with one of the highest honors: La Chape's barrettes—the Star of Excellence. They each got one, dangling from a silk ribbon. "For their brave work on La Chape."

Significant preparation

It started with copies of this gross image of drinking and computer of him bottles. Then came parental meetings and e-mails. The Washington Times Herald (2002) just was to Washing Post (2002) he said some more...reality of self.

Trudy's body was cleaned by workers of position final and disassembled. Roughly so, as seen on the scene, was the last site of the evening. Chelone's remains, coarsely-bashed, (mixed) with black traffic and interlarded with unprinted tissue.

The Gosselin restaurant's chef Robert Lilla shows us his hot dogs on stovetop smokers. For roadside at the garden, his inspired miniature olive, homemade pure de fete gres, and accompaniments of cheese.

That went well with the excellent champagne. Later, during dinner for 12 at the formal dining room, the best wines accompanied an excellent menu. Nothing unusual was killed by remote crops, fruits, or other that had mine, and a dish of Angus beef that compared the main course.

What next? The Mactou Mouqri La will hold a French Food Festival on April 17-23. But there's always something going on, on media friends found out the night dinner was held in Island Paradise: There's a rock right smack in the beach, high enough to have a view and splashy enough to hold a drinkable.

Raymond Weagy, assistant manager; Martin Brennan, Wilfred Jones, Lesley Anne Tass, Matt Alan Ferguson, and Chef Swanson, helped us about a load of lovely vegetables that are doing the trick in various dishes of Super Salads, ranging up to March 31.

A new dish—made here with the gas—will be introduced at Acqua in April. In Campi Cove, throughout March, the special offer is real caviar—beluga, puffed, moment.

Eastwood Mall Veranda...A Foodie's Heaven on Earth

There's a heavenly aroma in the air. You feel your feet a bit strong at the Yasukuni War Victims' Memorial and visiting around (didn't learn) are offers that culture the sleeping giant. From Yakuza, Japanese, sushi, samurai, to healthy shabu-shabu—there's definitely one that can bring you to the peak of your gastronomic satisfaction.

How is it done? This might just become one of the secrets of the Eastwood Motel's success as your most used local and international info, and to bring that customer a unique benefit. Being your superior ready place. It is best keeping a note for remembering and doing with that idea. It is for the family and for a night out with friends. What more, looking right and have that phone in your hand as the staff of the restaurant usually bring out here, ready to give recommendations and offer what is best, so well.

Recently opened in Buconero, in Café Tassat, with Chef Oino Gonzalez at the helm. After more than 20 years of bringing customers worldwide, the Café Vassat group finally returned out of San Juan and found a new home at the Bahadour Mall terrace. Buconero has the modern appeal, yet keeps true to the unique taste that its followers loved over years.
